Uncertainty has an impact on almost all aspects of human life and the way uncertainty is perceived and treated by different agents is an important driver of societal and economic change. Many researchers have, over time, developed a variety of theoretical and empirical approaches to study and interpret the impact of uncertainty on individual decisions and social phenomena. The conference “Navigating Uncertainty: Preparing Society for the Future” will provide a platform for interdisciplinary exchange on the systematic analysis of different ways individuals and institutions deal with uncertainty and of the resulting societal effects.
