In Kyrgyzstan, E-justice (i.e., ICT tools in courts) is being implemented to improve access to justice, transparency, fair trial and efficiency. This talk focuses on the impact and challenges of using digital tools to improve access to justice for women victims of gender-based violence. The talk will analyze approaches to the development of digital tools to address gender-based violence and national legislation. The study provides recommendations for improving e-Justice systems, national legislation and awareness raising to enhance access to justice for women victims of gender-based violence.
