Project:

My doctoral research focuses on the study and the application of optimization algorithms for the reconstruction of 3D medical breast images from few tomographic real data. Mathematically, the breast tomosynthesis problem is an underdetermined linear system of huge size and it is solved with a regularization item. A good solver must be able to reduce CT artifacts and also feasible to be implemented in parallel on commercial softwares. I am writing a commercial-like program, running on GPUs, to test first-order methods on real data.
